

Initially I was interested in working with the centre because of the passion I had for women's issues, especially violence against women. This passion continues today but throughout my time at the centre I have also been able to embrace my other values of promoting equality, ending violence for all, creating social change, building awareness of issues usually hidden from the public, and contributing to community unity. The team at ARCC has been integral to the joy I experience in my work; it is their support and creativity that has allowed me to integrate both my passion and experience into my work. I look forward to our future efforts and time together.

Brandy Morton